True Random Number Service

What's this fuss about true randomness?

Perhaps you have wondered how predictable machines like computers can generate randomness. In reality, most random numbers used in computer programs are pseudo-random, which means they are generated in a predictable fashion using a mathematical formula. This is fine for many purposes, but it may not be random in the way you expect if you're used to dice rolls and lottery drawings.

RANDOM.ORG offers true random numbers to anyone on the Internet. The randomness comes from atmospheric noise, which for many purposes is better than the pseudo-random number algorithms typically used in computer programs. People use RANDOM.ORG for holding drawings, lotteries and sweepstakes, to drive games and gambling sites, for scientific applications and for art and music. The service has existed since 1998 and was built and is being operated by Mads Haahr of the School of Computer Science and Statistics at Trinity College, Dublin in Ireland.

As of today, RANDOM.ORG has generated 1.12 trillion random bits for the Internet community.

The main content area features a search bar with options to search by flight number or route, and a "Go" button. A "NEW!" banner promotes finding the seatmap for a flight. Below the search bar, there is a "Seatmap Key" section with a legend for seat quality (Good, Some Drawbacks, Poor, Standard, Blocked, Crew, Power Port, Emergency Exit, Overhead TV, Galley, Lavatory, Closet) and a list of features (Detailed seatmap graphics, In-depth comments about seats with limited recline, reduced legroom, and misaligned windows, Color-coding to help identify superior and substandard seats, In-seat power port locations, Galley, lavatory, exit row, and closet locations). A sample seat map is shown, illustrating the layout of a typical aircraft cabin with rows 1 through 8 and seats A through F. The map highlights the "FIRST COACH" section and notes that seats 4 A, B, C, D, E, F have extra legroom due to the position of the bulkhead.

Versionista alerts you to Web site changes, visually showing what's been added and removed.

"Versionista provides both an accurate date of the last change and reveals the edits that have been made between versions of the site — highlighting what has been added and removed in side-by-side comparisons." — The New York Times

"Versionista [is] making it easier still to spot alteration over time." — The Economist

Tactical competitive intelligence

Versionista was designed for the rough-and-tumble world of today's Web, where subtle edits can offer an actionable edge.

- Monitor entire Web sites and receive e-mail alerts when changes that meet your regular expression filters are met.
- Track and archive any entity's total online presence, including social media, blogs, and other Web sites.
- Follow the evolution of any site, and know when important changes occur — even to deeply nested pages.

It's wasteful to spend your time trawling through a competitor or customer Web site hunting for changes. As well, for time-sensitive information, you may catch them too late.

What is KeePass?
Today you need to remember many passwords. You need a password for the Windows network logon, your e-mail account, your website's FTP password, online passwords (like website member account), etc. etc. etc. The list is endless. Also, you should use different passwords for each account. Because if you use only one password everywhere and someone gets this password you have a problem... A serious problem. The thief would have access to your e-mail account, website, etc. Unimaginable.

KeePass is a free open source password manager, which helps you to manage your passwords in a secure way. You can put all your passwords in one database, which is locked with one master key or a key file. So you only have to remember one single master password or select the key file to unlock the whole database. The databases are encrypted using the best and most secure encryption algorithms currently known (AES and Twofish). For more information, see the features page.

Is it really free?
Yes, KeePass is really free, and more than that: it is open source (OSI certified). You can have a look at its full source and check whether the encryption algorithms are implemented correctly.

As a cryptography and computer security expert, I have never understood the current fuss about the open source software movement. In the cryptography world, we consider open source necessary for good security; we have for decades. Public security is always more secure than proprietary security. It's true for cryptographic algorithms, security protocols, and security source code. For us, open source isn't just a business model; it's smart engineering practice.
